Working or studying abroad - yes - no - maybe?

- working experience and new skills will improve your future career prospects
- especially new language skills will make you more employable in the future
- better career chances in foreign country might mean that it's more likely to get hired
- a new language will be an advantage for your future
- you'll gain experience in culture, style of living, food habits, language, atmosphere, ambience, likes, dislikes
- you will become more independent, open-minded
- shows your initiative and willingness
- you'll get to travel a new country and probably neighboring countries as well
- you'll make new friends, broaden your worldwide network, and some might evolve into real friendships

What did our students think?

- → chance for a better life/future
- → more money
- → job security to ensure lifestyle
- → new people, friends, relationships
- → better food, weather and maybe beaches
- → an adventure

No doubt! Be adventurous and take the chance!

Working or studying abroad - yes - no - maybe?

- setting up an new life can be really expensive
- you might experience a culture shock, find it difficult to adjust because you think you might not fit in
- might become homesick and feel lonely
- maybe miss freinds and family (especially during the holidays or other special moments like birthdays etc.)
- paperwork and preparations might be a real hassle
- you don't know the language
- harder for your family to adjust to new schools or find a new job.
- maybe, living conditions are not great in your new country

What did our students think?

- → school, friends, home, family are left behind
- → maybe worse economy and education
- → lack of language skills
- → quit old job
- → less time for family
- → face difficulties you might not overcome (new culture, etc.)

Don't you dare! Of course, you're going!